

Message from Dr. Fuhr

We're in the heat of the summer and things are heating up at Activator Methods! We have met with our Clinical Advisory Board, and developed several new topics to be taught at our fall Intermediate and Advanced seminars. We recently announced our complete fall seminar schedule, which can be found at www.activator.com by clicking on "Seminars." Activator Online, the resource for Basic Scan Protocol training, continues to grow in popularity as doctors and students discover the convenience of the web-based seminar program. We have also been exploring ways to reward our Proficiency and Advanced Proficiency Rated Doctors for their diligence and dedication to the Activator Method. Look for important announcements and more exciting updates from Activator this summer!

RESEARCH Dr. Richard Roy issues new paper on spinal dysfunction and its relationship to the Activator Method

Dr. Richard Roy recently published a research paper that illustrates how the Activator Method analysis protocol has been able to locate spinal dysfunction in acute and chronic patients. Most importantly, the research showed that the Activator Method could reveal spinal dysfunction in patients without symptoms. The paper showed strong correlation of the analysis with functional radiographs, oswestries and thermometry. To review the complete paper, click here.

RELIABILITY Activator highlighted in Bangkok Post

Just how reliable is the Activator Method Chiropractic Technique? So much so, it is included in articles about chiropractic published around the world! Recently, Banalucka Tiramonkon of Thailand was profiled in the Bangkok Post, and in the course of the article, Activator was mentioned as the instrument technique used in chiropractic to maintain spinal health. Studies have indicated that the Activator Method is the world's number-one instrument adjusting technique, and this article's mention further reinforces that standing.
